

TITLE: How to Resonate as a Leader with Enrico Biscaro

Resonance is a unifying force that's essential to human-centered leadership. Defined as “a vibration of a large amplitude in a system caused by a small, periodic stimulus”, resonance is about connection. So as an adaptive leader, how can you be that agent of change, making positive waves that resonate with those around you? Well, let's find out, as we talk about resonance, resilience, empathy and how the best leaders tell amazing stories to sell an agenda.

This week's special guest speaker is Enrico Biscaro, who's traveled the globe as a human-centered leadership coach for more than fifteen years. A powerhouse in thought leadership, Biscaro's accolades include coaching thirty first-time managers and publishing his first book, titled 'Resonance: Stories and Strategies for Global Team Breakthroughs'.

In this episode of Evolve we discuss:

- How best to connect with people to resonate with them as a human-centered leader.
- Providing a safe place for those around you to feel understood.
- The power of storytelling as a tool to identify with people in human-centered leadership.
- Managing your own energy as an adaptive leader in order to protect yourself from burnout.

Enrico's new book is now available to buy from Amazon.
